

The art of multiple generations of bakers meets the art of Bolidt

German bakery Harry proves that old habits die hard. The company was founded over 300 years ago, when on 9 May 1688 Johan Hinrich Harry officially registered himself as an entrepreneur and from that moment on all sorts of bakery products are being manufactured on a daily basis. No less than ten generations have already put their time and effort into the business: that must be family passion! All this time, each generation gratefully used the gained experience and the successes of the ancestors. No wonder that the supply has never been more developed and therefore has been as contemporary and versatile as at this moment. There are more than 300 different types of bread in Germany and there is no country that consumes more bread than Germany. With a strong second leading position in the German bread and bakery market, Harry is the best-known bread brand among consumers and a competent, reliable partner within the food industry.

Because of the success, resulting in a continuously rising turnover, Harry has regularly invested in new estate, expansion and modernization to optimize its production. Already since 1999 the family business has been relying on the Bolidtop® 500 and Bolidtop® 700 flooring systems of Bolidt, provided with all the properties a large bakery needs. In the case of Harry, this means a non-slip seamless floor that is able to endure the heavy load of machines, equipment and fork lift trucks on a long-term basis. All of this is exactly what Bolidt does best! So it is no surprise that in the meantime out of all options, more than 3000 employees spread over six Harry bakeries in Germany are manufacturing their successful products on Bolidt flooring systems.

Thanks to the previous successes, Bolidt will always be a reliable floor partner for the future generations!
